

Rural Health... in your hands

Friday 11 November - Saturday 12 November 2011

General practitioners hold the health of rural South Australians in their hands

This year's RDWA Conference will bring together rural general practitioners, registrars, students, practice managers, and staff from Divisions and Networks to hear about the South Australian home-grown innovations in rural health, education, clinical practice and the business of general practice.

There will be key note speakers who will stimulate your thinking.

We have a special presentation by Dr Ken Milne, a Canadian rural Doctor, on participating in research and recognising yourselves as a centre of excellence.

Call for Abstracts

The Conference Panel of RDWA and Rural Doctors Association of South Australia invite you to submit an abstract showcasing your cleverness in practice and/or business.

If you would like to present at the Conference please submit a 200 word (maximum) abstract outlining your proposed topic.

The program will be constructed to allow for either 15 or 30 minute presentations with a 5 minute question time at the end of each presentation.

Depending on the nature of abstracts they may be themed into a panel presentation with time for more in depth interaction with the audience.

The organising group for this year's event from the RDASA is Dr Tim Wood, Dr Tim Kelly and Suzanne Mann, and from the RDWA, Lyn Poole, Mandy McCulloch and Dr Karen Sumner.

This group will also act as the Abstract Review Panel.

Please submit your abstract by 30 June 2011.
